the replacing of the dislodged organs. He claims that it is not necessary to cast a horse in this operation and said that authorities gave either method.

Mr. Perkins of Hebron testified on being an eye witness to the operation. Dr. Brainerd and Dr. Ness were also brought in to testify to the way that such an operation should be performed. This case took the greater part of the day, Tuesday, beginning about 9.45. The jury were out at about 5 o'clock. At a few minutes to six the verdict of the jury was ready. After an hour's deliberation they decided that the defendant was guilty and a fine of $75 was imposed.

Henry Burges, Frank Dugay, Dolley Gallant and Alec Gallant, four young boys, were brought before the court because of breaking, entering and stealing from the store of Ben Brown of Rumford. They entered the store at night and stole some bank bills, cigarettes, cigars, pipes and tobacco, in all amounting to about $3.95. They all pleaded guilty. Judge Bird gave the young fellows a good scolding and allowed Dolley and Alec Gallant to go home with their father after telling them that if they did not obey their father, or if they were brought before the court again they should receive severe punishment.

Henry Bangle and Frank Dugay were held over until Wednesday before being tried.

He neglected to pay his fine because through some mistake he could not find the justice. It was claimed that he was steward of a certain club on Waldo street at Rumford and was arrested upon the seizure of this liquor. After this he left the club and went to work in a grocery store and quit the liquor business. He was fined $50 and costs of $14.53 and was sentenced to jail.

Ed A. Finnan and Albert W. White who pleaded guilty but retraced the plea on the charge of assault on Jailer Farrar were sentenced Wednesday. According to what White said he did not intend to kill the officer, but it is known that he dealt the first and last blow upon Farrar.

Their plan was to saw a bar from the cell which they did, and then saw the bars from the window, but upon finding out that they could not do it, they planned to overpower the officer as he came to look up for the night, and lock him in a cell and then escape. That night on the 2d of May, Farrar came to look up a little later than usual. Soon after entering the cell he was attacked by these fellows who were armed with clubs. They got out of the cells by means of the sawed bar and were hidden in one cell.

Farrar received severe cuts on the head besides other injuries and had a narrow escape from being killed. This sort of crime is regarded as one of the worst kind and the sentence had to be in accordance with the greatness of the crime, therefore both White and Finnan were sentenced to 10 years imprisonment at the State's prison, on Thomaston, these sentences to commence at the expiration of their other sentences.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

SEASONABLE.

Oh, for a whiff of winter!
Oh, for a breath of spring
Or the passing sigh
Of a warm July
There is no delight
The charms of the teardrop season
I have often read about,
But on closer view
They are mighty few
And ones I could do without.

With a taste of zero weather
And a north pole tempered chill
Or an iceberg puff
It is quite enough,
And it more than fills the bill.
I could stand a lot of winter
And discuss it with a smile
If I owned a coat
On the corner lot
Of a balmy south sea isle.

For the children under sixty,
With their brand new Christmas skates
And a painted sled
That is bright and red,
There is fun done up in crates,
But for those sedate and aged
And out of the infant class
There is no delight
In a snowball fight
As they watch the winter pass.

Showing Them How.

When a large fat man who hasn't had on skates for twenty years puts on a pair of bright new runners to show the boys how, the air in those parts is filled with an incredible number of legs and arms in the next few minutes, while the clear, innocent ice wonders what it has done to deserve such a thumping.

Skating looks easy to one standing on the bank watching the process, and it is if one knows how, but having the art down to an exhibiting point and having known the way years ago are two different matters.

A man may never forget how he earned his first dollar or the form of his first love, but he does forget how to skate. For a pathetic one act drama that never responds to an encore the skating gyrations of a man who once was champion on well worth going to see, but a surgeon should always be among those present.

Not Collectible.

"That man owes me an apology,"
"Don't you know he is bankrupt?"
"Maybe I'll get a 10 per cent apology, then."

Puppy Teeth.

Some dogs delight to bark and bite,
And some delight to chew;
Not on rare things their jaws they wag,
But on your brand new shoe.

Inconsiderate Relation.

"Poor man! What brought you to this?"
"I'm ashamed to own it, but drink is 'the cause of my lowly estate.'"
"Oh, yes, I could. It was my rich uncle who should have left me a fortune, but he very carelessly drank it up before it got to me."

Quite Impartial.

"Who goes there, friend or foe?"
asked the man as he saw a figure prowling around in the dead of night.
"Neither, you blithering idiot. It is your wife."

Reflected Glory.

"Stimpkins is exceedingly brilliant today."
"Yes; he was at the vaudeville show last night."

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Shall Farmers Keep Sheep or Swine?
It was Gentlemen's Night in Bear Mountain Grange, Saturday evening. A good attendance of members and high spirits prevailed in some portions of this evening. Ice cream and soda biscuit were the simple refreshments. After recess a varied program was rendered, consisting of music by choir, select pieces by Brother Fernald, violin and piano, Sister Jennie Hamilton, accompanist. Besides there were a number of readings by brothers Fernald, Pike and Hamilton, and a series of tableaux by Arthur Kingman and Percy Kimball, representing scenes in forest life, and the hunters in action with rifles leveled and sighted to kill, and the party at rest testing the "Comforts of the Camp."
The scene on the stage was very suggestive, game fresh from the woods decorating the walls of the camp with guns, hunting rods and canoe outfit conspicuously arranged.

The regular question for debate was whether it is more profitable to keep sheep or swine?

Bro. McIntire was appointed by the Lecturer pro tem, Bro. W. K. Hamlin, to take the affirmative on the sheep side of the question in the place of the regular disputant, who was absent. Bro.
McIntire spoke at length, giving his own experience in dealing in sheep for many years, the advantages in the prices of sheep, wool and mutton, and came to the conclusion that sheep are a good kind of stock to keep for profit when well kept and with good pasturages and everything favorable.

Bro. McGowan told of some of his experience in raising swine and of the notable success he had had by the use of apples as a fat producer on store pigs.
Without any special effort to bring his pigs into condition for market, he had chewed a considerable quantity of apple for some months in the winter of an exclusive apple nature. Another brother gave a similar experience of success with the apple diet, in some cases permitting the animal very free indulgence in his favorite fruit diet. One result of giving the pigs their full freedom of choice was that after taking up the swine for their winter quarters and regular feeding, they seemed not to care much for a grain diet but preferably sought for the apples.

W. K. Hamlin, the Lecturer pro tem, on request of Bro. McIntire, gave an excellent lecture on swine and their uses.
His discourse was founded on the text:
"Darn a Hog!" And he spoke eloquently in enforcement of the idea suggested by the text. He gave his experience in the experience of the past season of keeping seven breeding sows. It appears they gave no cause for fault-finding but not being remarkably prolific, for two litters of thirteen pigs each was produced and several others in fair numbers. It is believed the reason for Bro.
Hamlin's condemnation of the porcine genius of animals in general is the price of pigs declined below the scale at which pig-culture was a profitable business. If that is so the keepers and feeders of swine will get a good point and be on their guard.
